Forecast for Saturday 26 Jun 2021

Weather: During the hours of darkness, patchy rain will soon clear, but cloud will stay low enough to cover hills down to 300m above sea level. Cloud will begin to lift and break up during the morning, and rise above the summits by 10 am. One or two light rain showers are possible during the day but these will be few and far between. Warm sunny spells are likely during the afternoon and early evening. It will tend to cloud over in the evening but stay dry, and cloud will remain above the mountain tops.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m:
Midnight to 7 am: 20% with thick cloud down to around 300m above sea level. 7 am to 10 am: 60% with broken cloud down to around 300m. 10 am to midnight: 90% with one or two shower clouds close to the summits.

Visibility: 0 to 7 am in valleys below 300m above sea level, 5km in rain, 15km in drier spells. On hills above 300 m, fog with visibility down to 100m.

7am to 10 am: hills below 300m, 8km in any showers, 20km generally. Above 300m, mist and fog with visibility down to 200m.

10am to midnight: Good visibility of 30km or more with fine views of distant hills.
